RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

University of New Mexico Albuquerque, USA
Research Assistant 2016 - Present
Research assistance for Mala Htun, Kendra Koivu, Gabriel Sanchez, Jami Nelson-Nuñez, and Michael Rocca

Fieldwork: Albuquerque, NM and Durham, NH March 2021 - September 2021
Conducting semi-structured interviews with UNM and University of New Hampshire (UNH) students in Engineering and Computing Departments to understand the climate and improve it for women and underrepresented minorities. This is an ongoing project, where the interview results are used to modify Bringing In The Bystander[®]-STEM training. I also serve as project manager. This is part of the NSF-funded project “Study of New Strategies to Combat Harassment in Engineering” (NSF #2000448; PI: Mala Htun).

Fieldwork: Albuquerque, NM May - August 2018
Conducted semi-structured interviews with UNM students and administrative staff to assess the effects of the Grey Area training, which is the mandatory, in person sexual harassment and assault training provided to currently enrolled students.

Fieldwork: Tokyo, Japan June 2017
Interviews with academics, upper management of Japanese companies, workers, feminists, and bureaucrats to assess women’s economic empowerment, as well as men’s involvement in child rearing. I conducted and scheduled interviews and translated from Japanese to English and vice versa.
